

CUSD election: the satisfied vs. the disgruntled

By MICHAEL BUTOWITZ

One incumbent and three challengers are vying for the two open seats on the Carmel Unified School District governing board in the March 8 election. A fourth challenger, Mary Graham, has announced that she is dropping from the race for private and personal reasons, although her name will remain on the ballot. Last week James I. Miller, an incumbent, also announced his drop from the race.

The issues concerning candidates are divided roughly along the same incumbent-challenger lines, with some overlapping in the areas of school finances and collective bargaining. But, a decided contrast exists between both incumbents (Frances Gaver and James Miller) and the challengers (Edward T. Reilly Jr., Barbara Sanford and Douglas E. Scott) when it comes to assessing the district's performance in its educational program. Additionally, the challengers all expressed in one form or another, their concern that the district's voters are dissatisfied with the performance of the governing board.

Basically, then, the race shapes up as a match between the satisfied and the disgruntled with all the candidates looking ahead to problems in financing and collective bargaining.

GAVER

Frances R. Gaver has served on the school district's board for the past four years and she says, "I really have a very good feeling about what's going on in the district... I think we've done a pretty good job and I'd like to continue it..."

When she first ran for the board three things concerned her, all three of which have been adequately handled during her four years in office. Back in 1973 she thought the district wasn't doing enough to recognize the diversity of students, particularly at the high school level, and certainly wasn't working enough on cooperative programs with other school districts. She also felt that the district wasn't doing enough to make use of volunteers in schools.

But now, she points out, the district has tailored educational programs for both low and high achieving students, college bound and vocationally oriented students and learning impaired students. She's proud of the fact that Carmel is participating in the Regional Occupational Program and the Monterey Peninsula Youth Project in cooperation with other school districts and cites the thousands of hours of labor donated to individual schools by volunteers. All in all, she feels pretty good about the district and cites high morale as evidence of a good program. She feels the district has a strong program in the basic subject areas and points to good standardized tests results as proof.

The future, however, concerns her. "One of the real challenges we're going to face is to maintain a good program in the face of uncertain financing." She worries about what types of limitations the state might impose upon district financing and how this will affect the district's overall program. Specifically she points to the problem of housing at Carmel High School. The school has been overloaded with students for years and she says, desperately needs a new science building.

FRANCES R. GAVER

She observes that the school board's primary function is to set policy and establish the district's philosophy, but one specific and immediate objective for the board will be to find a solution for the problem of overcrowding at the high school. She remembers vividly that district voters rejected a $5 million bond issue three years ago and just two years ago refused to pass a tax override designed to solve the student housing problem. What specific solution might lie in the future she's not sure, but the district may take another look at the possibility of switching the high school and middle school sites. Whatever course is chosen, she'd definitely like to be in on the decision making.

The state's new provisions allowing for collective bargaining on the part of district employees concerns her because "everything will become more formalized." With the institution of written contracts, she says, the district will have to be awfully careful. But, she feels "pretty optimistic" about the district's prospects for maintaining a harmonious relationship with its employees.

Gaver has lived in Carmel Valley for six years since moving here from Pittsburgh, Pa. She holds bachelor's and master's degrees in political science and has worked both in personnel administration and as an assistant editor for the Educational Testing Service in New Jersey. She has been active in the Middle School Parents Club, League of Women Voters, Lyceum, Monterey Peninsula Youth Project (serving as the school board's representative, she is currently president) and a newly formed school, the Monterey Peninsula Community School of Music.

REILLY

Edward T. Reilly Jr. is relatively new to the Peninsula, having come here two years ago from the New York-New Jersey area.

However, it didn't take him long to realize that his coworkers at CTB-McGraw Hill and his neighbors in Carmel Valley were dissatisfied with the school system. And he was shocked by the almost paradoxical lack of concern displayed by parents.

The problem, he feels, is that people in the Carmel district feel disenfranchised. That may be, he surmises, because board members have "been there awhile." The board has somehow become a fairly closed group and people feel they have little or no influence over the board's actions. "It seems to me that if people felt they had some sort of influence they would have been at board meetings."

Reilly says it's common enough for people to "protect the nest" when they've been involved in a project for some length of time. This may explain why he senses an attitude of defensiveness on the part of board members. People attending board meetings are almost forced into arguments rather than discussions. "Now it seems you almost have to play an adversary role at meetings. I'd like to see less defensiveness on the part of the board. (They) tend to get defensive about the status quo," with the result being poor attendance by parents at board meetings.

The combination of lack of parental concern and parental dissatisfaction with the district worries Reilly who, in a couple of years, will be sending his first child to the district.

Reilly's not sure how widespread any educational problems are in the district, but says, "What I sense is that parents think there are educational problems." He does point specifically to Carmelo School which he complains is "by far the poorest performing school as far as achievement scores."

Reilly says much of the complaining done by parents is probably symptomatic of the national trend towards a revival of emphasis upon the basics of reading, writing and arithmetic, a trend he's not opposed to. "I think there's a lot to be said for the back to the basics move."

Reilly is also concerned about financing and collective bargaining. The state's mandate to equalize school financing among districts will make decisions on the part of the board during the next few years critical.

Traveling canines

Recent project meetings for the 4-H Guide Dog Puppy raisers in Carmel Valley, could well be categorized as "Adventures with Public Modes of Transportation," because of the numerous hours recently logged by the five members from Buckeye and Boronda 4-H Clubs and their dogs.

SLEEPY 4-H'er rests with her golden retriever puppy at Amtrak depot in San Jose. Members and their pups had to rise at an early hour to arrive in San Jose in time to take the train back to Salinas.

They have travelled to Monterey to acquaint their puppies with the Monterey Peninsula Transit buses (they were welcomed as special guests of the Company); to the Monterey Peninsula Airport (a tour arranged by airport director, Nick Ford); and to San Jose by auto where they transferred to the rails to return to Salinas via Amtrak. This is the third year that Ed Haber of the Carmel Valley Golf and Country Club has arranged for the trip followed by luncheon as his guests at the club for the members and their dogs.

For many blind people, public transportation is the only means of getting around, so it is especially vital for the Guide Dog puppies to be familiar with all types of transportation. The meetings were planned with the most familiar first.

Buses are much like cars in terms of motion, but have a very different size, shape, and smell.

They must become accustomed to air brakes, doors that open with a hiss and thump, and must learn to settle themselves in a small space in order not to block the aisles. Their natural exuberance in greeting each new bus passenger must be controlled, as well.

The airport presents a little more of a challenge. Joining the Valley members for this experience was Kerry Garcia from Santa Cruz County with her Guide Dog puppy "Mattie", a black Labrador retriever. At the airport, puppies encounter many familiar noises and smells. In addition they must take in stride baggage conveyor belts, different types of automatic doors, and the earth shaking sound of a jet landing or preparing to take off. This ear drum throbbing noise is at a "safe" distance from the dogs — an approaching train is not.

The train experience is saved for last because of its fright potential to a young dog. To a puppy never less than six months old, a train pulling up to the ground level platform, must be an awesome sight considering the size with vibrations that even a human can easily feel; the loud different horn, flashing headlight — yet all of these puppies boarded readily and developed "sea legs" far more readily than their two footed companions.

The next event for the young trainers and their charges will be the Guide Dog Puppy Field Day to be held at the Alameda County Fairgrounds in Pleasanton on the twentieth of March; according to project leader, Mrs. Chip (Buffie) Collins.

CHS Walk-A-Thon

Carmel High School students will "take a walk" for rummage Saturday March 12, 10:00-4:00 and Sunday, March 13, 12:00-3:00.

Families and friends are co-ordinating efforts in the Carmel-Carmel Valley areas to make the 1977 Bargain Fair for student scholarships, bigger and better than ever.

The saleable items are desperately needed for the Fair scheduled for March 26 and 27th at the High School Gym.

Areas will be definitely assigned and included in next week's column. Everyone in the community is encouraged to participate by having their items ready when the student "Knocks on their door." To be sure of pick-up, please call one of the co-ordinators for this event: Jeanette Swanson, 659-4160, Mildred Hattan, 659-2468, or Gail Buche, 659-4183. Although we would like to knock on every door, it unfortunately would be impossible. There will be someone during those hours at Carmel Woods School (the former Continuation School Building in back) or at the Carmel Valley Community Center Pool for those people wishing to take their items to a drop off area.

Items needed include books, furniture, housewares, tools, clothing, jewelry, records, shoes, arts and crafts, and new items.

A note of thanks to Salih Meddy at the Oleaner Garden Shop for responding to the plea for apple juice bottles for bottle gardens. More bottles are needed as well and plants and other containers. Call Mrs. Beth Vannatta for pickup of these items... 659-4637.

CV Garden Club

A "New Introduction of Native Plants" will be given by guest speaker, Wayne Roderick, who will appear as guest speaker at the Thursday, March 10 meeting of the Carmel Valley Garden Association.

Presently Director of the Regional Park System at Tilden Park in Berkeley, Roderick is the former Museum Scientist of California Natives at the University of California Botanical Gardens in Berkeley.

The meeting scheduled for 8:00 p.m. in the Multipurpose room of Tularcitos School will be followed by a refreshment hour. The general public is cordially invited to attend without charge.

School board...

"Education," he points out, "hasn't had to deal with limits on resources." Until recently, school districts have simply raised taxes when more money was necessary. Now he thinks the district will "have to look harder at alternatives on how to spend money."

One option he favors is zero-based budgeting. "In agencies like the school board it's a fantastic decision-making tool for what's behind your organization... (it) can determine end results. A total examination of things from time to time is necessary." Rather than begin a budget with existing programs and expenditures, the board would have each particular expenditure justified annually. This, he feels, would help the board better assess priorities.

Now that collective bargaining is a fact of life for school districts, Reilly feels the board should take more of an active part in negotiations rather than simply hire a lawyer to represent the district. It particularly peeves him to see the board hire the same negotiator who handled Monterey's contract. He thinks negotiations might become too pat a matter if the same people are consistently involved. Contracts would be ruled by negotiators and not by the interests of the parties negotiated for. A hired negotiator, he says, has a limited background in terms of the districts needs and desires.

Reilly holds a degree in business administration from St. Francis College in New York. He is a member of the board of directors of the Rancho Tierra Grande Homeowners Association and serves on the county's overall economic development committee.

SANFORD

Barbara Sanford is an ex-teacher with four children, her oldest recently graduated from Carmel High School, who's been involved in a variety of school related activities during the 19 years she and her family have resided here. For 17 of those years she's attended school board meetings and she has never felt more critical of board action than she does now.

"By and large we have a board that has one point of view. They're intensely rude. They've driven people out of meetings... (and) they've taken votes before the public was allowed to comment," she charges. She also claims that some board action is handled behind the scenes, rather than in public meetings.

The district, says Sanford, is run by a clique that has no educational priorities. Expediency is the byword. "I think they've lost sight of what they were elected for," she observes.

Worse yet, she thinks the quality of education is deteriorating due directly to the district's efforts. The district, she claims, is attempting to lower parents' expectancy for their kids. If the parents don't have high expectations, she reasons, then they won't be disappointed in the district's performance or their child's.

Sanford thinks the district, especially at the high school, is putting too much emphasis "on kids who don't really want to learn." She admits that the district has programs aimed at high achievers or the mentally gifted, but complains that the kids in the middle are lost in the shuffle.

Class sizes are too high in the district, she claims, but the numbers are covered up in a variety of ingenious ways, such as including non-teaching administrators in average class size figures. She says that class size averages are closer to 32 than the 25-26 cited by the district if the non-teaching administrators are eliminated along with a relatively few low demand classes.

She'd like to see the district's educational priorities reevaluated and simplified. More emphasis upon the basic subjects is needed as opposed to interesting but superfluous classes and alternative programs like Grey Fox at the high school. Other

MASTER PLAN

Phyllis Freeman has moved out of the Valley and planning commissioner Bill Peters has announced that nominations for the vacancy left by her be submitted to Supervisor Sam Farr's office by March 7. Nominees must live between Highway 1 and Valley Greens Drive and should not be in a leadership position of any organization with interests in the Valley's master plan revision. The next master plan study committee meeting will be March 18 at 7:30 p.m. in Carmel Valley Manor.

ARBOR DAY

An arbor day will be celebrated on March 7 beginning at 10 a.m. at the Tularcitos School. Tree planting will take place on the front lawn on the Ford Road side of the school. Three trees, donated by Cypress Nursery will be planted at around 10:30 a.m.

CVPOA

Carmel Valley Property Owners Association will hold a meeting at 7:45 tonight (March 3) at the Los Laureles Lodge Conference Room. The agenda will include: master plan revision, the appeal of Carmel Valley Ranch, water problems, and the Carmel Sanitary District's area wide facilities study.

Trails are like weather. Everybody talks about them but nobody does anything. Monterey County has a trails element in its general plan which calls for just a few highly desirable, recreational trails. But there's no one in charge of actually gladhanding property owners. There's no one making a pitch. "Hey there. How's about dedicating a strip of your land for a public recreational trail?" In Monterey County that's laughable. You're probably smiling right now. But it's happening elsewhere — and with remarkable success.

It turns out that under the right conditions, it is to a land owner's benefit to dedicate an easement for a recreational trail.

By dedicating an easement to the right public agency, the landowner will gain a policing body who will see that hikers obey the rules and keep off the rest of the property.

Easements are not granted "to the public." They are granted to a public agency. The landowner must choose which public agency can do the best job in protecting his interests.

Easements dedicated to a public agency may have restrictions reserved to the property owner. He can restrict access to certain days or hours or seasons. He can place locked gates across the easement. Those members of the public wishing to cross the property would have to sign out the key from the public agency. The property owner may specify that certain environmental conditions be satisfied and access restricted during critical periods. It becomes the responsibility of the agency to determine when the environment can receive visitors and to keep them out at other times. Examples might be: no access during fire season, or during nesting season for certain birds, or at lambing, etc.

An easement gives a person only the right to cross another's property. It does not give permission to picnic, camp, pick flowers, or even pause. The exact location and width of the right of way is chosen by the property owner and easement users may not stray nor commit any other acts which place a burden on the property owner. By granting the easement to a public agency, the property owner is protected by the policing powers and personnel of that agency and by a clear body of law governing easements — the bulk of which is concerned with protecting the rights of property owners. He can in fact, collect damages if necessary. For this reason, the existence of an easement dedicated to a public agency for a recreational trail lowers his insurance rates as well as the cost to him of protecting his land against trespassers. A 1975 law protects the landowner against all liability for accidents suffered by others crossing on his land.

Owners may also limit easement users to non-motorized or non-vehicular traffic even though roadways along the easement may already exist.

In addition to the policing protection offered by a public agency, some of them have a budget to spend making improvements requested by a landowner. Examples might be: survey and trail design, erosion control, fencing and gates, litter removal, etc.

Easements do not have to be granted in perpetuity. They may be worded so as to expire after a certain period. The law says "Right of way granted for a limited period or on contingency or condition is just as firmly vested for time being as would be leasehold."

Landowners whose property lies along the route of a projected trail from the Trails Element of the Monterey County General Plan gain two additional advantages by dedicating easements. They get to choose the administering agency; they get to choose the route as it crosses their property. Many landowners may prefer not to wait until acted upon by a governing body. Some good "first contact" people are Gary Tate, Monterey Peninsula Regional Park District; Earl Smith, head of the Monterey County Parks and Recreation Dept.; and Chuck Maillard, California State Department of Parks and Recreation. The latter actually has a form to fill out for purposes of easement dedication.

But there's nobody working at getting the word to landowners about the advantages of recreational trail easements. Clip this Feedbag and start passing copies around.

Clydesdales

Carmel Valley 4-H members invite you to join them in Salinas at Sherwood Gardens shopping Center on March 30 between 12:00 and 5:00 p.m. for a special showing of the world-famous Budweiser Clydesdales. Viewing of these magnificent animals is FREE!

Non-rationed bazaar

Since everything else seems to be restricted and in short supply these days, the ladies of Martha's Guild and St. Dunstan's Episcopal Church members have selected the name "Non-Rationed Bazaar" for their annual spring rummage sale to assure customers that they have unlimited items to recycle for their benefit according to Mrs. Molly Applebee, publicity chairman.

Co-chairmen, Mrs. Dorothy McInroe and Mrs. Helen Parker have to date such specialties as premium clothing, wheel barrows and a disassembled wet-bar.

Save March 18 and 19 on your calendars for this one to be held in the church in Robinson Canyon from 9:30-2:00 each day.

Spring Horse Show

The Carmel Valley Trail and Saddle Club will hold its Annual Spring Horse Show on the club's grounds, East Garzas Road, Carmel Valley, on Sunday, March 20. Show time begins at 8 a.m., and both English and Western Divisions will be featured, using two arenas simultaneously. A record number of 49 events will be sponsored.

This show has been approved by both the California State Horseman's Association and Region Ten, a subdivision of that organization.

Both organizations give highly prized awards for points accumulated during the year by members competing in statewide events. This spring show will be among the first of those competitive ones for this coming summer.

Shows approved by these organizations can be counted upon to bring competitors from Santa Rosa to the North, and King City to the South.

Judges, always an important item in a show, will be Michael Moran of Redwood City for the English Division, and Richard Sereni of Los Altos Hills for the Western Division.

Entries should be submitted by March 17, however late entries will be accepted upon payment of a late entry fee.

Admission is free to spectators, and parking is plentiful. It will be a great show for horse lovers and those who just like to be out in the beautiful atmosphere of the club's grounds. Picnic facilities are free to those who wish to bring their own lunches, and both a snack bar and beverage bar will be available.

Mr. George Pullman of Carmel Valley will be the Show Manager, and his wife Dorothy, the Show Secretary.

Family film night

A low cost film festival and raffle extravaganza will be held by The Tularcitos Parent Co-op Nursery School on Friday March 4, from 7-9 p.m. The Family Film Night will be held in the multipurpose room at Tularcitos Elementary School, on Via Contenta Rd., Carmel Valley. The Parent Co-op is sponsoring the event to raise money to purchase playground equipment.

Tickets will be available at the door, and the price of admission will be $1.00 for adults, $.50 for children. The adult ticket will include a raffle chance, additional raffle tickets may be purchased.

The Family Film Night will feature the Little Rascals, Keystone Kops, Pet Shop, Monkeys Is The Craziest People, Porky Pig, Mighty Mouse, and other animated cartoons. Home made refreshments will be available.

For further information about the Family Film Night, or about the Tularcitos Parent Co-op Nursery School, contact the school at 659-4887.

Candidate's coffee

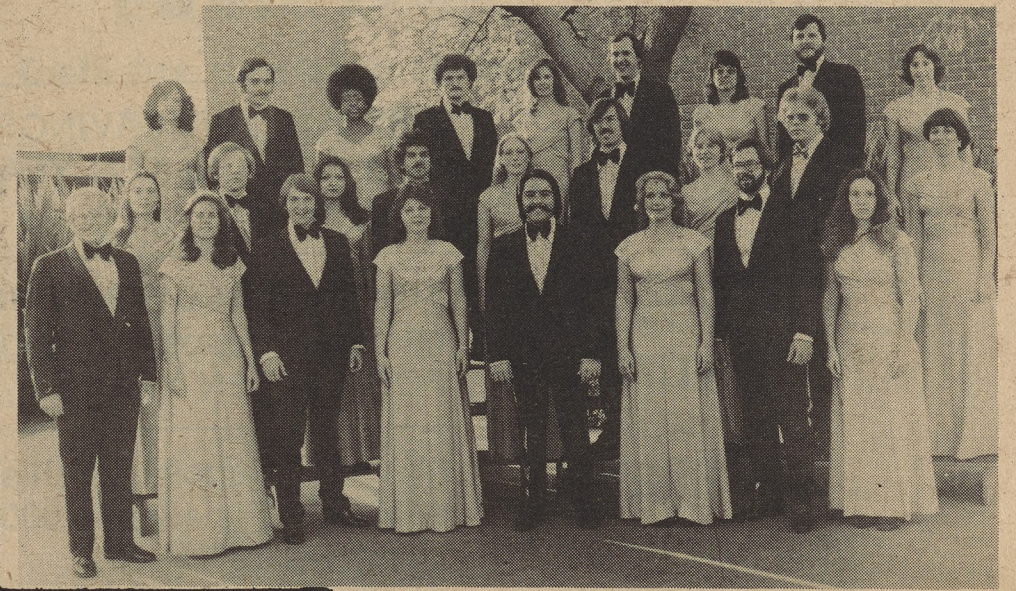

Candidates for seats on the Carmel Unified School District Board were introduced to Valley neighbors at a "Coffee" hosted at the Poppy Road home of Mrs. Tom Williams. Honored guests were Mrs. Barbara Sanford and Edward Reilly.

Chapel Guild

The Carmel Valley Community Chapel Guild will meet on Wednesday, March 9, at 12:15 p.m. at Fellowship Hall on Village Drive. At a time when there is so much discussion about the place of women in the church, we are very happy to present a speaker, Mrs. Beatha Hoy, of San Francisco, who has been an active member of church affairs for many years.

Mrs. Hoy is a Chinese-American, born in San Francisco, and educated in business management at the University of California at Davis. She has been an elder of the Chinese Presbyterian Church in San Francisco for many years. For fourteen years she was the manager of the Presbyterian Western Area Distribution Service, and Assistant to the Director of Finance for the San Francisco Presbytery. At present she is a real estate broker. We hope that all members of the Guild will avail themselves of the opportunity to hear this interesting speaker and bring a guest.

As is traditional with March meetings, Mrs. Don Johnson will chairman the luncheon committee, serving one of her delicious Chow Mein meals. She will be assisted by Mrs. John Broberg as co-chairman, and Mrs. Edmund Capon, Mrs.

Did you know?

DID YOU KNOW... that any enterprising soul with the foresight to import to our area a truck load of containers in which to carry and store water before the restricting of that precious commodity went into effect would have been well on their way to their first million? The supply just did not meet the demands of panic stricken gardeners; pet owners; ranchers; and your average man on the street in search last week of common — and suddenly extinct — BUCKETS.

DID YOU KNOW... that 68 of the 101 points scored by Carmel against Hollister in their history making "Century Game" last week were scored by Carmel Valley teammates? Bill Colohan was credited with 18; John Frincke 16; Tom Frincke 11; John Whipple, 9; Doug Weller, 8; and Steve Sepersky, 3. The final score was Haybalers, 62-Padres, 101.

DID YOU KNOW... that a Valley lady honored for two decades of "many significant contributions and worthy and timely programs for Girl Scouting and the Monterey Bay Council..." is the proud mother of three SONS, BUT NO daughters? Mrs. Richard (Mary Kay) King was awarded a handsome tray at the annual Council awards dinner and business meeting for her twenty three years of dedication. One of the highlights of her years of leadership was the American Bi-Centennial Program Wide Game which she created last year to acquaint the girls of the Council with their heritage and each other.

DID YOU KNOW... that Ch. Vin-Melca's Numbus, named chamber chatter

By JEANELLE KAMINSKE

Mark your calendar and spread the word to all your friends. The big night is Saturday, March 19, for the famous "Auction d'Elegance" at 7:30 at the Hidden Valley Music Seminars. Tickets are only $5 donation for champagne, buffet, music and a chance to bid on hundreds of interesting items in our silent auction. While you sip champagne and nibble on gourmet goodies, you'll have a chance to bid on everything from custom-made jewelry to a forced-air furnace... from a dinner at a local fabulous restaurant to a weekend at Tahoe...

Proceeds from this well-known event go to benefit the Community Center, the Hidden Valley Music Seminars, and the Chamber of Commerce Beautification program.

Hidden Valley is offering to the highest bidder an "evening of music." Planning a party? Hire a hall! Want to go on a short luxury cruise? Bid on two tickets on a luxury liner for one-way passage between San Francisco and Los Angeles (or vice-versa); meals included. I can hardly wait!

Perhaps you have some item or service you can offer for bids. Call us at 659-4000. We will give you a receipt (for the IRS) for your donation, list your gift and your name in our brochure and in our media advertising.

Do you have your new Carmel Valley Business Directory printed for you by the members of the Chamber of Commerce? Please add the following names and phone numbers: Optometrist: Dr. Roger Strange, 625-2020 (not 624-2020); Septic Service: Peninsula Septic Tank Service, Bill Parham, 659-2465; Realtor-Associates: Jack George at Porter-Marquard, 659-2268; Ginny Drew at Jay Hopkins Rlty, 659-2212; EMERGENCY FIRE (FOR VILLAGE AREA) 659-2221.

The Robert Schwartz Memorial Park on the Bank of America corner that was literally destroyed by vandals recently is being repaired by the Chamber. Injured shrubbery has been trimmed back or replaced.

Dead plants have been removed and new ones will be put in their places. The destroyed benches will not be replaced at this time in order to discourage the vandals. The Chamber is having flood-lights installed and directed onto the park. We'd like to enlist the cooperation of all Village residents to help us get it back in shape, to maintain it by eliminating the littering and vandalism, and donate any of your skills or materials to repair it.

Our next meeting is scheduled for March 23. Watch this column for the time and place. If you would like to join us in making the beautiful Carmel Valley a better place to live, do join. You don't have to be in business or retired from business. Come and get to know us and hear how you can get involved in improving your community. Membership forms are available at our Village office (Carmel Valley Business Services) in the Oak Building, or call us at 659-4000. We serve the entire Valley, from Cachagua to Highway One.

TO CONSERVE WATER: Pick up your free shower restrictors at the Chamber Office, and save more than half your shower water (courtesy of Cal-Am Water Co. and the Monterey Peninsula Chamber of Commerce.)

"Kennedy's Children" comes to MPC

Casting has been completed for the Monterey Peninsula College production of "Kennedy's Children," a contemporary drama to be presented in the MPC Main Stage Theatre from March 10-12 and 16-19.

The play, by Robert Patrick, is a study of characters who came of age in the sixties, in the shadow of the Kennedy assassination, and who now sit in a bar reflecting on the cataclysmic changes they have witnessed in themselves and society.

Stephanie Cunningham will play Wanda, whose thoughts are of John F. Kennedy and the "Camelot" legend; Jan Garland plays Rona, who remembers her years as a peace marcher and follower of the drug cult; Sheila De Angelis is Carla who tells of her dreams to be the next Hollywood sex goddess.

In the role of Mark, Ken Klingensmeier reads from the diary he kept as a soldier in Vietnam; Robert Colter will play Sparger, who reveals how being gay has affected his life and Joe De Vincenzo will play the bartender.

Curtain time for the show, directed by Morgan Stock, chairman of the creative arts division, is 8:30 p.m. Tickets are $2 for general admission, $1.50 for students and military. For reservations call the MPC Box Office after 5 p.m. at 375-0455.

Oakland ballet returns charming "Gallop and Kisses," the exciting "Tarentella," the romantic "Seascape," "Afternoon of a Faun," and other works.

The Oakland Ballet, one of the major companies of the West Coast, tours extensively in the United States and Canada. Artists include Sally Streets, Tricia Kaye, Carol Rheiner, Janet Carole, Stacey Swane, Peter Nel, Robert Warner, Michael Lowe, and Lance James—all ably supported by a corps of strong dancers. Miss Swane recently was one of the five Americans to participate in the competition in Varna, Bulgaria.

The Oakland Ballet has been described by the critics as "excellent, charming," (Stockton Record); "Excellent enough for minute criticism," (Reno Evening Gazette); "Elegant," (Oakland Tribune); "Enjoyable professional entertainment," (Idaho Statesman-Boise); "as delightful an evening of dance as Victoria has seen," (Victoria Times); and "strong and exuberant," (Spokane Review-Spokane).

The Oakland Ballet, under the directorship of Ronn Guidi, is now in its fifteenth year. It is the resident company in its home city at the Paramount Theatre of the Arts and also tours exclusively.

Tickets are now on sale at the Director's office of Sunset Center, 8th and San Carlos, Carmel. All seats are reserved and sell for $6.50 and $5.50 and we urge you to call 624-3996 to make your reservations for the best seating. This is a performance by a group that is going places. So don't hesitate and be disappointed, call or come into the office.

Beautiful and Lofty Things

Enchanted by the dream

BY JEFF HUDELSON

"It was the dream itself enchanted me" is a line spoken by the poet, W.B. Yeats, in Dan Gotch's original play, "Beautiful Lofty Things". The line is at once, a capsule review and an excellent character note for the show's performers. But "dreams" do differ.

And differing indeed were the dreams of the play's two characters. Yeats dreamed of Art, purely and honestly expressed; Maude Gonne, the actress, dreamed of a free Ireland. Both dreams were "Beautiful Lofty Things" and, at times, conflicts arose.

The play is set in the study of Yeats' Irish home in 1929. The event is the final meeting between the poet and the actress. Throughout the unfolding action of the play, we discover a great deal about the enchanting-disenchanted love-inspiration relationship of these two great figures of the Irish Renaissance.

At intervals throughout the production we are treated to excerpts of Yeats' poetry and the journals of Maude Gonne. Yet, while this may sound "dull", it is not. Gotch has put together a beautiful package that become a unity.

Gotch, as a playwright, has done an excellent job, and as the show's director, he has assembled a strong cast and "blocked" the show well.

The role of Yeats is very well portrayed by Bob Lester, whose characterization in this show is quite different from his recent roles. It is the best performance I have seen him give as an actor. My only objection is a continuing one — at times (particularly early) he is too loud.

Lester has a very strong voice, and occasionally (especially when expressing anger) he uses too much volume. He doesn't need it. He has tremendous vocal "definition", which is well displayed in this poetic work.

The role of Maude Gonne is played by Ann Thurber. Her characterization is strong and consistent. It is very easy to see the beautiful actress with whom Yeats fell in love. It is less easy to see the zealous Irish patriot in her performance.

Ms. Thurber's performance struck me as being perhaps a touch too controlled, too calculating. Perhaps Gotch, as director, was blind to the intention of Gotch, the playwright, in this one instance.

Still, these "criticisms" are but quibbles — for the show itself flows beautifully and seems to hover very near great truths.

Joan Cobb Hopkins provides the show's musical accompaniment, and Jeanne Graham the visual accompaniment with her excellent costumes.

While I saw "Beautiful Lofty Things" at the Wharf Theatre, their final performance will be presented this Friday night (March 4) in Carmel. The curtain time is 8 p.m. at the Carl Cherry Foundation, Guadalupe and Fourth. Be enchanted by the dream.

BOB LESTER and Ann Thurber in "Beautiful and Lofty Things."

Network, a television satire

by julia montague

Paddy Chayevsky must have had a good time writing "Network." I'm sure all avid television viewers must feel that most networks are patterned after UBS, but I certainly hope not.

This marvelous movie is a brittle commentary on the power that destorys men's souls... money. Brilliantly directed by Sidney Lumet, each of the stars portrays his part so perfectly that it is hard to choose a luminary amongst them.

ROCCO TAVANI (playing a looney physicist who believes he's Albert Einstein) gets reassurance from the nurse Sally Bruns that the murder he's just committed doesn't matter too much. "The Physicists" is playing at Hartnell College this weekend in the college's Studio Theatre.

William Holden, as the News Chief whose authority is usurped, is getting handsomer with age, and is entirely believable as the lover of the frenetic Faye Dunaway. Robert Duvall is the icy-cold epitomy of a corporate clay foot, and Peter Finch is superb, in his late role, as the slowly debilitating newscaster. If he does not receive a posthumous Oscar for this role, then there is really something wrong with the system. He gave it everything he had, and left the viewer breathless with his acting vitality.

UBS Broadcasting is losing it's percentage of the viewing market, and drastic steps need to be taken to raise the ratings. Peter Finch, who has been fired, offers to blow his brains out on camera, and low and behold, the ratings go up.

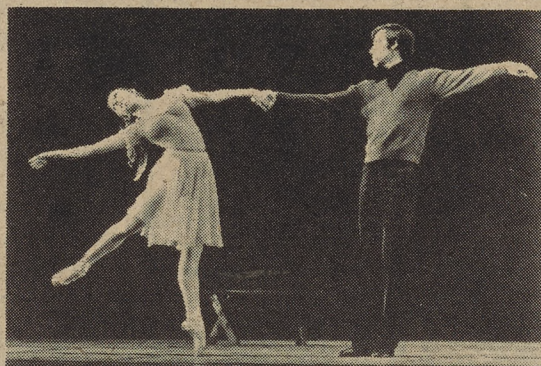

Then a black commie is offered a prime time spot to show how the liberation armies are operating in their kidnappings, bank robberies and all the other goodies they are capable of. Once again the ratings go up. These are the brainchildren of Ms. Dunaway, who revels in the excitement she has generated in the depraved minds of Americans. The ratings start to slip again, and she comes up with another idea... turn Finch into a crusader for good, and you think... where will it end.

I found myself laughing uproariously, but in many instances, I was laughing alone. Sometimes the audience did not find the horror amusing. Well, it ends with the deaths of executives, the undoing of the liberation army, and the comeuppance of Ms. Dunaway and her "classic" interpretation of what "turns on" (the tube in) American homes.

Take this one in your stride, it is satire, after all. Not since "The Groove Tube" has anyone taken such a nasty poke at television, and I loved it.

districts, she says, have thrown out alternative programs as poor substitutes for strong basic programs.

"Do we ever evaluate the worth of what we have (at Carmel High School)," she questions, adding that it's time to evaluate the entire program, but not in piecemeal fashion. She says a cost analysis of each department at the high school would be invaluable in aiding the district in establishing educational priorities, particularly in light of a coming financial crunch.

"Money is a big issue," she says, "but, Serrano-Priest (the state supreme court decision requiring equal financing for districts) will take money away from us no matter what we do... we're not going to have control over it anyway... I'm interested in spending what we have on kids."

Sanford thinks the district currently spends too much on administrative costs and that this is well hidden in the budget. "You try to find out how much is spent on salaries (and) travel. I think we have to decide where to spend the money."

The school board, she complains, is too set in its ways and not at all flexible when it comes to making decisions. The board doesn't listen to the people and depends too much on top administration, which is intensely disliked by the voters, she claims.

As an example she points to a study session held by the board in January dealing with housing problems at the high school. During that session, she claims, board members discussed what options would be presented to the voters as opposed to asking voters what options they might prefer. The tactic, she says, is the reverse of what should happen. Options should first be presented to voters and then discussed by the board.

Sanford ran for the school board eight years ago and was defeated. But, this time she senses a mandate. Her name was placed on the ballot by petition of 10 district parents, indicating a built-in base of support.

"I'm a doer," she says, "there's no problem that's insolvable, but you need to have people with open minds." And that's a characteristic Sanford feels is in short supply on the current board.

SCOTT

Douglas E. Scott says, "I realize I am a novice in this area and that I am just starting to get involved," but he is nonetheless sickened by what he observes to be rising costs and less in the way of returns to parents, children and taxpayers.

"I see that the majority of kids (I've met) can't read and write. I'm frightened by our tax bills... we're not getting our money's worth," he complains bitterly.

Along with empathizing with the taxpayer who, he says, is "getting sand-papery to death," Scott decided to run for election to the school board because he refuses to allow his five-year-old daughter to wind up semi-literate like so many of the children he says he's met. "I won't let it happen to her," he declares.

DOUGLAS E. SCOTT

Perhaps the biggest problem with the school system is the fact that one single area can't be pointed to as the reason why children aren't being properly educated. Basically he thinks that Carmel has "quite a good system," and yet he still runs into all those kids who just can't read or write. "I don't know that I can put my finger on any one specific problem," he says. But judging from results he maintains that problems do exist.

In Scott's view, teachers are a major source of problems for the district both educationally and financially. Though he admits that most are probably dedicated, and points out that his own daughter's teacher is excellent, he still thinks there are some lackadaisical ones who "ruin the system." Tenure and the strengthening of teacher's unions, he feels, detract from the overall purpose of education. Some teachers are only interested in "feathering their own beds" and not in educating students.

"In the early years," he points out, "if a student has one teacher who's a self-server... it takes a lot of time to repair the damage."

Scott is vehemently opposed to across-the-board cost of living increases and says teachers are "raping us." He doesn't think teachers deserve automatic increases particularly in light of the end result — children who can't read or write.

But, Scott admits that teachers aren't solely to blame and that parents should bear a portion of the burden as well. "You can't put the blame on one teacher, if a child doesn't get the stimulus at home... I'd like to see the schools get the parents involved." And in assessing the Carmel district he says, "As far as I can see, at the lower levels and at least at Woods School, they do a fantastic job of involving parents."

Scott moved to the Peninsula six years ago from Southern California where he obtained a bachelor of science degree at California State University, Northridge. He's a member of the Monterey County Foundation for Conservation, the Monterey Peninsula Taxpayers Association, the International Finance Association and the International Marketing Association.

the Best Hound at the 101st Westminster Kennel Club Dog Show last week in New York's Madison Square Garden is a Carmel Valley dog? Co-owned by Carmel Middle School instructor, Mrs. John (Patricia) Craige C.V. and Harold Shuler of Monterey, the Norwegian Elkhound, one of six finalists took six first place ribbons in the Hound category.

DID YOU KNOW... speaking of the Westminster Show... that former Valleyite, Derek Rayne, was the only Northern California judge among thirty to officiate at the showing of the elite from Dogdom? An expert on the breed of Welsh Corgis, Rayne will be remembered as the organizer of many Corgi specialty shows held at the Carmel Valley Inn.

DID YOU KNOW... that the large camel replacing the Thunderbird emblem on their former Valley Hills location is NOT the new logo of sun-parched Carmel Valley Chamber of Commerce, but marks the spot of Peterson Conway's latest extension of "Conway of Asia"... the exotic Caravan Restaurant where one may dine under the wedding umbrellas of Maharajahs?

Let's follow the rules

Water rationing for all customers of California-American Water Company is now in effect. Immediate compliance is required in order to avoid stricter rationing.

- All residential customers are limited to 50 gallons of water per person each day averaged over a two-month billing period. For example, two people in a house are allotted 6,000 gallons for a two month period.
- Non-residential customers are required to reduce their monthly consumption by varying percentages from 15 percent for restaurants to 50 per cent for golf courses.
- Violation of the regulations will result in restriction of service at the meter to what will flow through a one-eighth inch orifice. The restriction will stay in place at least 72 hours for the first violation and 720 hours for subsequent violations.
- In the event of extreme hardships, an appeals procedure will be available through the Water Management Agency.
- If you have questions about these regulations, call the Company's rationing "Hot Line" at 375-5117 on weekdays from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m.
